

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
SAN JOSE DIVISION

THEODORE BROOMFIELD, ET AL.,

Plaintiffs,

v.

CRAFT BREW ALLIANCE, INC., et al.,

Defendants.

Case No. 17-cv-01027-BLF

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANT’S MOTION TO DISMISS

[Re: ECF 16]

Hawaii is a state as well as a state of mind. When adults want to escape the mainland, they can go to their local grocery store, purchase a package of Kona Brewing Company beer, and feel as though they are transported to the beaches of Hawaii. This case is about the importance of where that beer actually is brewed. Plaintiffs Theodore Broomfield, Sara Cilloni, and Simone Zimmer (collectively, “Plaintiffs”) allege on behalf of themselves and three putative classes of consumers, that Defendant Craft Brew Alliance, Inc. (“CBA”), doing business as Kona Brewing Company, intentionally misleads consumers into believing that Kona Brewing Company beer (“Kona beer”) is exclusively brewed in Hawaii.

Before the Court is CBA’s Motion to Dismiss Plaintiffs’ Consolidated Class Action Complaint. Motion to Dismiss (“Mot.”), ECF 16; Consolidated Complaint (“Compl.”), ECF 15. Plaintiffs filed an opposition to CBA’s motion to dismiss on May 26, 2017. (“Opp’n”), ECF 21. CBA filed a reply on June 9, 2017. (“Reply”), ECF 23. The Court heard oral argument on August 3, 2017 and thereafter took the matter under submission. The Court has reviewed the parties’ briefing, the oral argument of counsel, and the robust legal authority involving food and drink labeling. For the reasons below, the Court GRANTS IN PART and DENIES IN PART CBA’s Motion to Dismiss.

I. BACKGROUND

Defendant Craft Brew Alliance, Inc. (“CBA”) is a publicly traded conglomerate that acquired Kona Brewing Company (“Kona”) in 2010. Compl. ¶ 18. Prior to its acquisition by CBA, Kona had been brewing its beer in Hawaii since the company started in 1994. Id. ¶ 17. The Kona brand includes a variety of beer that references Kona’s Hawaiian origins, including “Longboard Island Lager,” “Big Wave Golden Ale,” “Fire Rock Pale Ale,” “Wailua Wheat Ale,” “Hanalei Island IPA,” “Castaway IPA,” “Lavaman Red Ale,” “Lemongrass Luau,” “Koko Brown,” and “Pipeline Porter.” Id. ¶ 22.

Although Kona has a Hawaiian brewery that makes its draft beer sold in Hawaii, all of its bottled and canned beer, as well as its draft beer sold outside of Hawaii, are brewed in the states of Oregon, Washington, New Hampshire, and Tennessee. Id. ¶¶ 1, 19. Plaintiffs allege that Kona beer is packaged and marketed in a manner that is intended to mislead reasonable consumers seeking to purchase a Hawaiian-made beer. See, e.g., Id. ¶¶ 23-25 (“In essence, Defendants intentionally mislead consumers into believing that a small brewery in Hawaii – which it owns and operates – brews all of the Kona Brewing Co. Beers that Defendants sell on the mainland.”).

Plaintiffs take issue with a number of representations on the packaging of Kona beer. The Consolidated Complaint contains various images of the packaging for six-packs and twelve-packs of beer to support Plaintiffs’ arguments that CBA intended to create the impression that Kona beer is brewed in Hawaii and exported to the continental United States. See generally, Compl. For example, on the top of the box for twelve-packs of Kona beer there is an image of a map of Hawaii which marks the location of the Kona Brewing Co. Brewery on the Big Island. Id. ¶¶ 26, 32. The packaging of the twelve-packs also includes the statement: “We invite you to visit our brewery and pubs whenever you are in Hawaii.” Id. As for the bottles of Kona beer themselves, an image of the Hawaiian island chain and the phrase “Liquid Aloha” are embossed on the front of each bottle. Id.

The packaging for each variety of beer is further adorned with its own Hawaiian-related images, including orchid flowers, volcanoes, palm trees, surfers, canoes, waterfalls, and hula dancers to match the theme of whichever beer is being marketed and sold. Id. ¶¶ 28-73. Each type of beer has its own slogan printed on the handle of the six-pack, such as “Thirst’s Up!” on the package for Longboard Island Lager, “Catch a Wave!” for Big Wave Golden Ale, and “Crack Open Aloha!” for Koko Brown. Id. ¶¶ 30, 35, 70. Depending on the type of beer, the bottom of the package for the six-pack includes the image of a Hawaiian island, such as Oahu, the Big Island, or Molokai, next to a narrative and a description of the specific beer. Id. ¶¶ 31, 36, 41, 46, 51, 56. Plaintiffs allege that the only address listed on the packaging is “75-5629 Kuakini Highway, Kailua-Kona, Hawaii 96740.” Id. ¶¶ 32, 37, 42, 47, 52, 57, 60, 64, 67; but see CBA’s Request for Judicial Notice (“RJN”), ECF 17, Exhibit E (Island Hopper Variety twelve-pack includes list of five brewing locations next to address in Kona, Hawaii). Plaintiffs assert that these “prominent references to and images of Hawaiian landmarks, traditions, history, and culture, taken in isolation and as a whole, are clearly designed to create the false impression that the Kona Brewing Co. Beers are brewed in Hawaii.” Id. ¶ 73.

Separate and apart from the representations on the beer packaging, Plaintiffs allege throughout the Complaint that CBA misrepresents Kona beer as “craft beer” when it is not. See, e.g., id. ¶¶ 115, 116, 133. Plaintiffs base their assertion on statements made by a CBA executive on an earnings call in 2016 that discussed how “the Kona brand plays like a craft brand imported from Hawaii.” Id. ¶ 75. Moreover, CBA’s 10-K filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”) states that “Kona Brewing is one of the most distinctive craft brewers with a broad portfolio of beers that reflect a uniquely Hawaiian flavor profile, a recognized track record in sustainable business practices, and deep ties to its local community as Hawaii’s oldest and largest craft brewery.” Id. ¶¶ 78, 79. None of the Plaintiffs alleges that they relied on these “craft brew” representations.

Specifically, Plaintiff Theodore Broomfield alleges that he purchased a twelve-pack of Kona’s Longboard Island Lager from Walgreens in San Francisco. Id. ¶ 12. Plaintiff Sara Cilloni alleges that she regularly purchased Longboard Island Lager, most recently purchasing a six-pack in San Jose. Id. ¶ 13. Plaintiff Simone Zimmer alleges that she regularly purchased packages of Kona beer, including the Island Hopper Variety twelve-pack, which includes a selection of Kona beer. Id. ¶ 14. All three Plaintiffs allege that they saw and relied on the representations on the 1 packaging of Kona beer, which varied based on the type of beer they purchased. Id. ¶¶ 12, 13, 14.

 2 Specifically, Plaintiffs allege they relied on the image of the map of the Hawaiian Islands which 3 marks the location of the Kona Brewing Company Brewery on the Big Island. Id. Plaintiffs allege 4 they believed the beer was brewed in Hawaii, and they would not have purchased Kona beer (or 5 would have paid significantly less for it) had they known the beer was actually brewed in the 6 continental United States. Id.

7 Plaintiffs allege that CBA has intentionally capitalized on consumers' willingness to pay 8 more for goods that are from Hawaii. See id. ¶ 82. These allegedly unfair and deceptive practices 9 have harmed Plaintiffs and the purported classes of purchasers of Kona beer by causing them to 10 pay a "premium" for Kona beer they bought under the mistaken belief that it was brewed in 11 Hawaii. Id. ¶ 96. Plaintiffs seek to enjoin CBA from continuing to deceptively package Kona 12 beer, and sue for damages. Id. ¶ 97.

13 The putative class action is brought pursuant to Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil 14 Procedure and consists of three classes: (1) a Nationwide Class of "[a]ll persons in the United 15 States who purchased any of the Kona Brewing Co. Beers within the relevant statute of limitations 16 periods," (2) a California Subclass of "[a]ll persons, who are California residents who purchased 17 any of the Kona Brewing Co. Beers, or who purchased any of the Kona Brewing Co. Beers within 18 the State of California, during the relevant statute of limitations periods," and (3) a California 19 Consumer Subclass of "[a]ll persons, who are California residents who purchased any of the Kona 20 Brewing Co. Beers, or who purchased any of the Kona Brewing Co. Beers within the State of 21 California, for personal, family, or household purposes during the relevant statute of limitations 22 periods." Id. ¶ 99. Plaintiffs assert nine causes of action against CBA arising from its marketing 23 and sale of Kona beer. Specifically, Plaintiffs seek to represent the California consumer 24 subclasses against CBA for the following causes of action ("COA"): violation of California's 25 Consumer Legal Remedies Act ("CLRA"), Cal. Civ. Code §§ 1750, et seq. (First COA); unlawful, 26 unfair, and fraudulent business practices in violation of California's Unfair Competition Law 27 ("UCL"), Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200, et seq. (Second COA); false and misleading advertising 28 in violation of California's False Advertising Law ("FAL"), Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 17500, et

1 seq. (Third COA); breach of express warranty (Fourth COA); and breach of implied warranty 2 (Fifth COA). Plaintiffs also seek to represent the California subclasses as well as the broader 3 nationwide class of consumers on claims for the following causes of action: common law fraud 4 (Sixth COA); intentional misrepresentation (Seventh COA); negligent misrepresentation (Eighth 5 COA); and restitution based on quasi-contract/unjust enrichment (Ninth COA). See generally 6 Compl. This Court has jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a) and (d).

7 II. LEGAL STANDARD

8 A. Rule 12(b)(6)

9 “A motion to dismiss under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) for failure to state a 10 claim upon which relief can be granted ‘tests the legal sufficiency of a claim.’” Conservation 11 Force v. Salazar, 646 F.3d 1240, 1241–42 (9th Cir. 2011) (quoting Navarro v. Block, 250 F.3d 12 729, 732 (9th Cir. 2001)). When determining whether a claim has been stated, the Court accepts 13 as true all well-pled factual allegations and construes them in the light most favorable to the 14 plaintiff. Reese v. BP Exploration (Alaska) Inc., 643 F.3d 681, 690 (9th Cir. 2011). However, the 15 Court need not “accept as true allegations that contradict matters properly subject to judicial 16 notice” or “allegations that are merely conclusory, unwarranted deductions of fact, or 17 unreasonable inferences.” In re Gilead Scis. Sec. Litig., 536 F.3d 1049, 1055 (9th Cir. 2008) 18 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). While a complaint need not contain detailed 19 factual allegations, it “must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to ‘state a claim to 20 relief that is plausible on its face.’” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (quoting Bell Atl.
21 Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007)). A claim is facially plausible when it “allows the 22 court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Id.

23 On a motion to dismiss, the Court’s review is limited to the face of the complaint and 24 matters judicially noticeable. MGIC Indem. Corp. v. Weisman, 803 F.2d 500, 504 (9th Cir. 1986); 25 N. Star Int’l v. Ariz. Corp. Comm’n, 720 F.2d 578, 581 (9th Cir. 1983). However, under the 26 “incorporation by reference” doctrine, the Court also may consider documents which are 27 referenced extensively in the complaint and which are accepted by all parties as authentic. In re 28 Silicon Graphics, Inc. Sec. Litig., 183 F.3d 970, 986 (9th Cir. 1999), abrogated on other grounds by S. Ferry LP, No. 2 v. Killinger, 542 F.3d 776, 784 (9th Cir. 2008).

B. Leave to Amend

In deciding whether to grant leave to amend, the Court must consider the factors set forth by the Supreme Court in Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178 (1962), and discussed at length by the Ninth Circuit in Eminence Capital, LLC v. Aspeon, Inc., 316 F.3d 1048 (9th Cir. 2009). A district court ordinarily must grant leave to amend unless one or more of the Foman factors is present: (1) undue delay, (2) bad faith or dilatory motive, (3) repeated failure to cure deficiencies by amendment, (4) undue prejudice to the opposing party, and (5) futility of amendment. Eminence Capital, 316 F.3d at 1052. “[I]t is the consideration of prejudice to the opposing party that carries the greatest weight.” Id. However a strong showing with respect to one of the other factors may warrant denial of leave to amend. Id.

III. REQUEST FOR JUDICIAL NOTICE

Before turning to CBA’s motion to dismiss the Consolidated Complaint, the Court addresses CBA’s Request for Judicial Notice (“RJN”), ECF 17. CBA requests the Court to take judicial notice of the earlier-filed complaints in each action that were eventually consolidated into the instant case. ECF 17, Exhibits A, B. Plaintiffs oppose this request and argue that the Consolidated Class Action Complaint is the operative complaint which “supersedes” the earlier complaints. ECF 22. CBA also requests judicial notice of images of the packaging for five varieties of Kona beer. ECF 17, Exhibits C-G. Plaintiffs do not oppose CBA’s request for judicial notice of the product packaging.

First, Exhibits C through G are properly subject to judicial notice because they are incorporated by reference into the Consolidated Complaint. See Knievel v. ESPN, 393 F.3d 1068, 1076 (2005). As for Exhibits A and B, though the Court may take judicial notice of public records, the original Broomfield and Cilloni complaints will not be noticed “for the truth of the matter asserted therein.” In re Bare Escentuals, Inc. Sec. Litig., 745 F. Supp. 2d 1052, 1067 (N.D. Cal. 2010); see also M/V Am. Queen v. San Diego Marine Const. Corp., 708 F.2d 1483, 1491 (9th Cir. 1983). The Court does not take judicial notice of the legal reasoning or disputed facts contained in publicly filed court records, but rather considers only the existence of such

1 allegations and arguments. See, e.g., Lee v. City of Los Angeles, 250 F.3d 668, 690 (9th Cir. 2001)
 2 (permitting a court to take judicial notice of another court's opinion, but not the truth of the facts 3 recited therein).

4 CBA argues that the Court should take judicial notice of the original Broomfield and 5 Cilloni complaints for more than their existence. See generally RJN Reply, ECF 24. CBA asks the 6 Court to compare the "conflicting reliance allegations" made in the Consolidated Complaint with 7 the allegations in the original complaints. Id. 3. In fact, throughout its motion to dismiss, CBA 8 repeatedly relies on allegations in the original Broomfield and Cilloni complaints that are not 9 present in the Consolidated Complaint. See, e.g., Mot. 5-6 ("Plaintiffs' Consolidated Complaint 10 conspicuously deletes all references to and images of Kona labels...along with references to 11 Kona's website."). This is improper. CBA contends that the Court need not "blindly accept the 12 allegations in the pleadings as true if [the] allegations are contradicted by uncontested facts set 13 forth in...facts that are included in materials that can be judicially noticed." RJN 3 (citing Yang v.
 14 Dar Al-Handash Consultants, 250 Fed. App'x 771, 772 (9th Cir. 2007)). However, none of the 15 cases cited by CBA involves a court taking judicial notice of conflicting allegations in a complaint 16 that was subsequently amended or superseded by an operative complaint. This is because the 17 Ninth Circuit recognizes the "well-established doctrine that an amended pleading supersedes the 18 original pleading." Ferdik v. Bonzelet, 963 F.2d 1258, 1262 (9th Cir. 1992), as amended (May 22, 19 1992); see also Loux v. Rhay, 375 F.2d 55, 57 (9th Cir. 1967) ("The amended complaint 20 supersedes the original, the latter being treated thereafter as nonexistent.") (citing cases), 21 overruled in part by Lacey v. Maricopa County, 693 F.3d 896, 928 (9th Cir. 2012). This doctrine 22 prevents the Court from comparing the allegations in Plaintiffs' original complaints to those in the 23 operative Consolidated Complaint in deciding CBA's motion to dismiss. See Williams v. Cty. of 24 Alameda, 26 F. Supp. 3d 925, 936 (N.D. Cal. 2014) ("[T]he Court will not consider any facts in 25 the first amended complaint ("FAC") that are not pled in the SAC.")

26 The issue CBA raises regarding the conflicting allegations in Plaintiffs' earlier complaints 27 could certainly become relevant as evidence against Plaintiffs, but it is not proper for the Court to 28 consider the truth or weigh the credibility of such evidence in connection with a motion to dismiss.

1 Id. (“While prior pleadings may be admissible in evidence against the pleader, the Court is bound 2 to accept as true allegations in the operative pleading on a motion to dismiss and generally cannot 3 consider evidence outside the pleadings without converting a motion to dismiss into a motion for 4 summary judgment.”) (internal citations omitted). At this stage, the Court takes judicial notice of 5 the original complaints for their existence only, including the figures and images of Kona beer 6 product labels referenced in the original complaints. Plaintiffs are incorrect that the Court cannot 7 take judicial notice of the images of the Kona beer labels in the original complaints, which are a 8 matter of public record and not subject to reasonable dispute. Opp’n 3. However, the Court will 9 not consider Plaintiffs’ allegations of reliance on such labels in the original complaints.

10 For the foregoing reasons, CBA’s request for judicial notice is GRANTED.

11 IV. DISCUSSION

12 CBA moves to dismiss the Consolidated Complaint on multiple grounds. First, CBA 13 argues that Plaintiffs’ claims are not plausibly alleged because the representations on the 14 packaging for Kona beer are, at most, non-actionable puffery or are qualified by a clear disclaimer.
15 Mot. 9-11. Specifically as to the claims under California’s consumer protection statutes, CBA 16 argues the claims are not plausible because no reasonable consumer would be misled by the 17 packaging. See Mot. 11-14. Second, CBA contends that Plaintiffs have failed adequately to allege 18 claims for common law fraud, intentional misrepresentation, and negligent misrepresentation. See 19 id. 14-16. Third, CBA argues that Plaintiffs’ breach of express and implied warranty causes of 20 action must fail because Plaintiffs do not allege facts to establish a promise that Kona beer was 21 brewed exclusively in Hawaii. See id. 16-18. Fourth, CBA argues that Plaintiffs lack standing to 22 pursue injunctive relief under California’s consumer protection statutes. See id. 18-20. Fifth, CBA 23 challenges Plaintiffs’ ability to obtain equitable relief when an adequate remedy at law is 24 available. See id. 20-21. Finally, CBA takes aim at the putative nationwide class and asserts that 25 Plaintiffs lack standing to bring claims on behalf of out-of-state consumers for violations of their 26 state laws, and that claims by out-of-state consumers likewise fail for lack of personal jurisdiction 27 over CBA. See id. 21-24. The Court addresses CBA’s motion to dismiss with respect to each 28 category of Plaintiffs’ claims in turn below.

A. Actionable Misrepresentations and the Reasonable Consumer Test

At the outset, CBA argues that all of Plaintiffs' claims must be dismissed because the images and statements on the packaging for Kona beer are at most "mere puffery" and are not actionable misrepresentations. Mot 9. CBA goes on to argue that all of Plaintiffs' claims are based on the same "defective premise" that a reasonable consumer would be misled into believing that the Kona beer he or she purchased was brewed exclusively in Hawaii. Id. CBA's argument that no reasonable consumer would be misled by the beer packaging is appropriately directed toward Plaintiffs' first three causes of action for violations of California's consumer protection statutes. For the reasons below, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have adequately alleged that certain representations on the six- and twelve-pack packaging of Kona beer are actionable misrepresentations that are likely to deceive a reasonable consumer into thinking that the beer was brewed in Kona, Hawaii. Therefore, CBA's motion to dismiss on the grounds that Plaintiffs have not alleged actionable misrepresentations and that no reasonable consumer would be misled by the packaging is DENIED.

Plaintiffs' first three causes of action in the Consolidated Complaint are for violations of California consumer protection statutes: the CLRA, UCL and FAL. See generally Compl. The CLRA prohibits unfair methods of competition and unfair or deceptive acts or practices; the UCL prohibits unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business acts or practices; and the FAL prohibits unfair, deceptive, untrue, or misleading advertising. Williams v. Gerber Prods. Co., 552 F.3d 934, 938 (9th Cir.2008) (citing Cal. Civ.Code § 1770, Cal. Bus. & Prof.Code §§ 17200 and 17500). Claims under the CLRA, UCL and FAL are governed by the "reasonable consumer" test, under which a plaintiff must show that "members of the public are likely to be deceived." Williams, 552 F.3d at 938; Consumer Advocates v. Echostar Satellite Corp., 113 Cal. App. 4th 1351, 1360 (2003). CBA separates their position into two parts: (1) the representations on the packaging of Kona beer are not actionable because they are either puffery or are objectively true; and (2) no reasonable

1 consumer would be misled by the representations. These arguments are interrelated under the 2 applicable reasonable consumer test. As such, the Court considers them together.¹

3 Under the reasonable consumer standard, Plaintiffs must allege facts to show that the 4 alleged misrepresentations are “likely to deceive” reasonable consumers. Freeman v. Time, Inc., 5 68 F.3d 285, 289 (9th Cir. 1995); see also Lavie v. Procter Gamble Co., 105 Cal. App. 4th 496, 6 508 (2003). Because the “reasonable consumer” inquiry is an objective standard, claims may be 7 dismissed as a matter of law where an alleged statement amounts to “mere puffery” or “in the 8 context, is such that no reasonable consumer could be misled” in the manner claimed by the 9 plaintiff. Haskell v. Time, Inc., 857 F. Supp. 1392, 1399 (E.D. Cal. 1994) (citing Cook, Perkiss 10 and Liehe, Inc. v. N. Cal. Collection Serv. Inc., 911 F.2d 242, 245 (9th Cir. 1990)).

11 Courts have recognized that the deceptive nature of a business practice under California’s 12 consumer protection statutes is usually a question of fact that is inappropriate for decision on 13 demurrer or a motion to dismiss. See Dumas v. Diageo PLC, No. 15-cv-1681, 2016 WL 1367511, 14 at *3 (S.D. Cal. April 6, 2016) (citing Williams, 552 F.3d at 938); see also Linear Technology 15 Corp. v. Applied Materials, Inc., 152 Cal. App. 4th 115, 134-35 (2007) (“Whether a practice is 16 deceptive, fraudulent, or unfair is generally a question of fact which requires ‘consideration and 17 weighing of evidence from both sides’ and which usually cannot be made on demurrer.”) (internal 18 citations and quotation omitted). Courts granting motions to dismiss under the reasonable 19 consumer test are upheld in “rare situations.” Williams, 552 F.3d at 938.

20 Here, CBA argues that the representations allegedly relied on by Plaintiffs are not 21 actionable misrepresentations, and are at most “mere puffery” on which a reasonable consumer 22 could not rely. Mot. 9. According to CBA, no reasonable consumer could have interpreted the 23 packaging for Kona beer as Plaintiffs purportedly did, and the California statutory violations must 24 therefore be dismissed. Mot. 9-14. Under the reasonable consumer test, “[g]eneralized, vague, and 25 unspecified assertions constitute ‘mere puffery’ upon which a reasonable consumer could not rely, 26

27 ¹ To be clear, CBA argues that the lack of an actionable misrepresentation on the packaging is 28 potentially dispositive of all of Plaintiffs’ claims, not only the consumer protection claims.
However, the reasonable consumer test applies only to Plaintiffs’ CLRA, UCL and FAL claims.

and hence are not actionable.” Anunziato v. eMachines, Inc., 402 F. Supp. 2d 1139 (C.D. Cal. 2005) (citing Glen Holly Entm’t, Inc. v. Tektronix Inc., 343 F.3d 1000, 1005 (9th Cir. 2003)). To be actionable, a statement must be “specific and measurable” and capable of being proven true or false or of being reasonably interpreted as a statement of objective fact. Southland Sod Farms v. Stover Seed Co., 108 F.3d 1135, 1145 (9th Cir. 1997).

Plaintiffs allege to have relied on the “packaging” of certain varieties of Kona beer before making their purchases. Compl. ¶¶ 12-14. CBA contends that the Hawaiian imagery on the packages for each variety of Kona beer, as well as the statement “Liquid Aloha” and the invitation to visit Kona’s brewery and pubs in Hawaii, are not affirmative misrepresentations but are, at most, “textbook” examples of non-actionable puffery. Mot 9-10. According to CBA, none of these references to Hawaii is a specific and measurable factual statement about where the beer is made. Id. 9-10. In support of its argument, CBA points to the “explicit identification of all brewing locations on every product label,” that would dispel any notion that the products were brewed exclusively in Hawaii. Mot. 10; RJN Ex. A ¶ 64. Since the labels disclose five locations where the beer is brewed, only one of which is Hawaii, CBA argues that the representations on the six- and twelve-pack packaging cannot amount to actionable misrepresentations. Mot. 9.² The list of Kona’s five brewing locations also appears on the bottom of the Island Hopper Variety twelve-pack allegedly purchased by Plaintiff Zimmer. Mot. 7; RJN Ex. E.

In response, Plaintiffs argue that the Consolidated Complaint alleges the following “specific and non-ambiguous” representations on the six- and twelve-pack packaging that are actionable and likely to deceive reasonable consumers into believing that the beer was brewed exclusively in Hawaii: (1) the only listed address on the outer packaging is “75-5629 Kuakini Highway, Kailua-Kona, Hawaii, 96740”; (2) the image of the map of Hawaii identifies Kona ² CBA also challenges Plaintiffs’ allegations that CBA misrepresents Kona beer as “craft brew” because no plaintiff is alleged to have relied on the statements. Mot. 10-11. Plaintiffs concede that the “craft brew” allegations are not included in the Consolidated Complaint as misrepresentations that consumers relied on in purchasing Kona beer, but rather the statements are “evidence of Defendants’ intent to deceive consumers.” Opp’n 9 (emphasis added). Plaintiffs further represented at the hearing on the motion to dismiss that they do not seek leave to amend to allege misrepresentations based on the “craft brew” allegations.

1 Brewing Company's brewery on the Big Island; and (3) the statement "[w]e invite you to visit our 2 brewery and pubs whenever you are in Hawaii." Opp'n 4, 7. In its reply, CBA counters that those 3 representations in particular are objectively true because "a Kona brew pub actually exists at that 4 location." Reply 2.

5 If the Consolidated Complaint solely alleged pictures of surfboards and the vague phrase 6 "Liquid Aloha" on the beer packaging, the case would end there. However, the Court finds that 7 the Hawaiian address, the map of Hawaii identifying Kona's brewery on the Big Island, and the 8 statement "visit our brewery and pubs whenever you are in Hawaii," are not mere puffery but are 9 specific and measurable representations of fact that could deceive a reasonable consumer into 10 believing that the six- and twelve-packs of Kona beer were brewed in Hawaii. These 11 representations are distinguishable from those on the packaging of Red Stripe Beer in Dumas v.
12 Diageo PLC, No. 15-cv-1681, 2016 WL 1367511, at *6 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 16, 2016), a case on 13 which CBA heavily relies in its motion. Mot. 10, 13. The Dumas court granted defendant's 14 motion to dismiss a complaint alleging that Red Stripe Beer engaged in unfair and deceptive 15 practices by misleading consumers into overpaying for Red Stripe under the mistaken impression 16 that the beer was made in Jamaica. 2016 WL 1367511, at *6. The Court agrees with CBA that 17 many of the representations challenged by Plaintiffs in the Consolidated Complaint are non-18 actionable along the lines of those found to be "vague and meaningless" in Dumas. Id. For 19 example, the phrase "Liquid Aloha" on every package of Kona beer is akin to the slogan "The 20 Taste of Jamaica" on the packaging for Red Stripe. In addition, merely referencing Hawaii and its 21 culture on the packaging is not enough on its own to confuse a reasonable consumer regarding the 22 origin of the beer. See Pernod Ricard USA, LLC v. Bacardi U.S.A., Inc., 653 F.3d 241, 253 (3d 23 Cir. 2011) (reference to "Havana Club" on bottle of rum not misleading when bottle clearly stated 24 the product was "Puerto Rican Rum.")

25 However, there is no equivalent in Dumas to Plaintiffs' allegations regarding the Hawaiian 26 address, the map of Hawaii that identifies the Kona brewery, and the invitation to "visit our 27 brewery" in Kona. These representations go beyond those held to be non-actionable in Dumas, 28 and they do more than evoke the "spirit" of Hawaii or indicate that the beer is "Hawaiian-style."

1 Considered together in context, these statements and images amount to specific and measurable 2 representations that could deceive consumers into believing that they were purchasing beer made 3 in Kona, Hawaii at the specific brewery location listed and depicted on the package.³

4 CBA argues that the disclaimer on the labels of Kona beer is enough to contradict the 5 representations on the outer packaging. Even if the Court considers the Kona beer labels 6 themselves, which are included in CBA's request for judicial notice, the placement and language 7 of the disclaimer are not dispositive in this case. The Consolidated Complaint rests solely on the 8 outer packaging for the six- and twelve-packs of Kona beer, not the labels for the beer cans or 9 bottles themselves. Compl. ¶¶ 12-14; Opp'n 10. Reasonable consumers are "not required to open 10 a carton or remove a product from its outer packaging in order to ascertain whether representations 11 made on the face of the packaging are misleading." Marty v. Anheuser-Busch Companies, LLC, 43 12 F.Supp.3d 1333, 1341 (S.D. Florida 2014); see also Williams, 552 F.3d at 939 (holding that 13 reasonable consumers are not "expected to look beyond misleading representations on the front of 14 the box to discover the truth from the ingredient list in small print on the side of the box.").

15 CBA concedes that there is no disclaimer identifying Kona's brewing locations on the 16 packaging for the six-pack or twelve-packs at issue, with the exception of the Island Hopper 17 Variety twelve-pack. Mot. 7 n.5. Thus, the list of Kona's brewing locations on the beer label, 18 which is obstructed by the packaging, does not inform the Court's inquiry regarding the allegedly 19 deceptive representations because the disclaimer was not visible to the consumer at the time of 20 purchase. CBA cites to cases where courts granted motions to dismiss under the "reasonable 21 consumer" standard, but the disclaimers on the beer labels in those cases were not obscured and 22 did not require consumers to remove the beer from the packaging. See Bowring v. Sapporo

23 24 ³ The Court recognizes, and Plaintiffs concede, that Kona Brewing Company operates an actual 25 brewery at that location in Kona, Hawaii. However, the relevant question is not whether the 26 statements on the package are objectively true, but rather whether the statements, taken as a whole, 27 are likely to deceive members of the public. Williams, 552 F.3d at 938. True representations can 28 still support liability under the reasonable consumer standard if the representations are actually misleading or have the "capacity, likelihood or tendency to deceive or confuse members of the public." Anderson v. The Hain Celestial Grp., Inc., 87 F.Supp.3d 1226, 1236 (N.D. Cal. 2015) (internal citations omitted).

1 U.S.A., Inc., No. 16-cv-1858, 2017 WL 902151 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 10, 2017); Nelson v. MillerCoors,
 2 LLC, 15-cv-7082, 2017 WL 1403343 (E.D.N.Y. March 31, 2017). In Bowring, the plaintiffs 3 challenged representations on Sapporo's beer labels, not the outer packaging for six- and twelve-4 packs. 2017 WL 902151, at *1. The Sapporo labels included a disclaimer that appeared "in darker 5 contrasting font on the front label for bottles and on the side or back of cans." Id. Considering the 6 context of the disclaimer placed right next to the allegedly deceptive representations, the court 7 held that references to Sapporo's historic roots in Japan were "eclipsed by the accurate disclosure 8 statement" on the label and were thus not misleading. 2017 WL 902151, at *4. The court 9 analyzing a disclaimer in Nelson also made clear in its reasonable consumer analysis that "Foster's 10 Beer utilizes no exterior packaging that would obstruct the disclaimer." 2017 WL 1403343, at *6.
 11 In contrast, Plaintiffs have solely alleged reliance on misrepresentations on the outer packaging for 12 six- and twelve-packs of Kona beer, which obscures the labels that contain the list of brewing 13 locations.

14 Plaintiffs raise a further issue with the language of the disclaimer that the Court finds 15 persuasive. The disclaimer on the Kona beer label lists five locations, including "Kona, HI, 16 Portland, OR, Woodinville, WA, Portsmouth, NH, and Memphis, TN" which encompass "all 17 locations where the beers are brewed." Mot. 12, RJN Ex. A ¶ 64. A list of multiple locations on a 18 product label does not amount to an explicit statement that the beer is brewed and packaged at a 19 particular location. In fact, there is no way to tell from the label which brewery made the beer 20 being purchased by consumers. From the vantage point of the reasonable consumer reading the 21 label with the disclaimer, the beer is just as likely to be brewed in Kona, Hawaii as it is to be 22 brewed in Memphis, Tennessee. Particularly the inclusion of Kona, Hawaii on the list mitigates 23 the disclaimer's effectiveness, since Plaintiffs allege that no bottled or canned beer bearing the 24 Kona label is actually brewed in Kona, Hawaii. Therefore, even if the Court was to consider the 25 label in the context of the packaging, a reasonable consumer could still be deceived because the 26 list of brewery locations does not "alert a reasonable consumer as to the location where [Kona 27 beer] is brewed." Marty, 43 F.Supp.3d at 1341.

Given the vague nature of the disclaimer, CBA cannot avail itself of the decisions involving Sapporo and Foster's beer which dealt with sufficiently descriptive disclaimers and did not require consumers to "make inferences as to the beer's place of origin." Nelson, 2017 WL 1403343, at *6; Bowring, 2017 WL 902151 at *1 (Sapporo disclaimer stated "Brewed and Bottled [or Canned] by Sapporo Brewing Company, La Cross, WI for Sapporo U.S.A., New York NY.") Therefore, even if a reasonable consumer could conceivably remove the beer from the packaging to view the label before purchase, a non-descriptive list of five brewing locations that includes Kona, Hawaii, does not warrant dismissal of Plaintiffs' claims under the reasonable consumer test.

For the foregoing reasons, the Court finds that the Consolidated Complaint alleges actionable misrepresentations, and the Court cannot conclude as a matter of law that the misrepresentations would not mislead a reasonable consumer.⁴ Accordingly, CBA's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' claims on these grounds is DENIED.

B. Common Law Fraud and Misrepresentation Claims

Next, CBA moves to dismiss Plaintiffs' causes of action for common law fraud, intentional misrepresentation, and negligent misrepresentation. Mot. 14. Under California law, to state a claim for fraud a party must plead facts to sufficiently allege five elements: (1) a misrepresentation (false representation, concealment, or nondisclosure); (2) the speaker's knowledge of falsity (scienter); (3) the intent to defraud or to induce reliance; (4) justifiable reliance; and (5) resulting damage. See, e.g., Lazar v. Superior Court, 12 Cal.4th 631, 638 (1996). As explained above, the Court concludes that the Consolidated Complaint adequately alleges actionable misrepresentations indicating that Kona beer is brewed in Hawaii. However, CBA further argues that Plaintiffs have not alleged the required elements of CBA's intent to mislead, or justifiable reliance on the alleged misrepresentations by Plaintiffs. Mot. 14-16.

⁴ CBA attempts to knock out the CLRA claim for failure to allege an "affirmative" misrepresentation. Mot. 14. The Court finds no support for CBA's argument that an affirmative representation must be "false," and finds that the Consolidated Complaint adequately alleges affirmative representations under the CLRA. Moreover, the CLRA permits claims based on fraudulent omissions so long as the omission is "contrary to a representation actually made by the defendant." Daugherty v. American Honda Motor Co., Inc., 144 Cal.App.4th 824, 835, 51 Cal.Rptr.3d 118 (2006). Here, Plaintiffs allege that CBA's omission of the location where Kona beer is brewed is contrary to CBA's representations that the beer is brewed in Hawaii. Opp'n 15.

Contrary to CBA's assertions, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have alleged more than conclusory allegations to support the element of intent to defraud or induce reliance. The Consolidated Complaint contains numerous statements by CBA executives that evidence CBA's intent to defraud consumers into believing that Kona beer is brewed in Hawaii. Compl. ¶¶ 74-78. For example, Plaintiffs allege that CBA's Chief Marketing Officer stated in an earnings call that "the Kona brand plays like a craft brand imported from Hawaii." Id. ¶ 4. Plaintiffs also argue that CBA's statements that Kona is a "craft brewer" is evidence of CBA's intent to mislead consumers, even though these allegations are not themselves actionable misrepresentations. Id. ¶¶ 79-81. These references to CBA's public statements and SEC filings provide a sufficient factual context to satisfy the element of intent to defraud at the motion to dismiss stage. Moreover, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure make clear that "[m]alice, intent, knowledge, and other conditions of a person's mind may be alleged generally." Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b).

CBA's argument that Plaintiffs do not allege justifiable reliance on the packaging because "the labels indicate otherwise and specifically identify where the products are brewed" is similarly not persuasive. As discussed above, the label does not identify where the specific product being purchased was actually brewed. Rather, the label lists five cities including Kona, Hawaii, a location where Plaintiffs allege the bottled and canned beer is decidedly not brewed. The Consolidated Complaint also contains allegations that Plaintiffs relied on the packaging, not on the beer label containing the various brewery locations.⁵ Plaintiffs have thus alleged justifiable reliance on the allegedly false representations on the package.

The parties also dispute whether the economic loss doctrine bars Plaintiffs' negligent misrepresentation claim. Indeed, even district courts in the Ninth Circuit are split on this issue. Compare Zakaria v. Gerber Prod. Co., 2015 WL 3827654, at *11 (C.D. Cal. June 18, 2015) with Minkler v. Apple Inc., 65 F. Supp. 3d 810 (N.D. Cal. 2014). The confusion in the case law arises from courts' differing interpretations of the decision in Robinson Helicopter Co. v. Dana Corp., which left open various exceptions to the economic loss rule as applied to a claim for negligent misrepresentation claim. 34 Cal. 4th 979, 988 (2004). In Robinson, the California Supreme Court made clear that “[t]he economic loss rule requires a purchaser to recover in contract for purely economic loss due to disappointed expectations, unless he can demonstrate harm above and beyond a broken contractual promise.” Id. However, Robinson left open various exceptions and explained that the doctrine “hinges on a distinction drawn between transactions involving the sale of goods for commercial purposes where economic expectations are protected by commercial and contract law, and those involving the sale of defective products to individual consumers who are injured in a manner which has traditionally been remedied by resort to the law of torts.” Id. Furthermore, claims of fraud and intentional misrepresentation that are independent of a breach of contract are not subject to the economic loss rule. Id. at 991 (“The economic loss rule is designed to limit liability in commercial activities that negligently or inadvertently go awry, not to reward malefactors who affirmatively misrepresent and put people at risk.”) Robinson’s exception to the economic loss rule for fraud claims generated uncertainty regarding its application because California includes negligent misrepresentation within the definition of fraud. Boyd v. Travelers Indem. Co., 46 F.3d 1138 (9th Cir. 1995).

CBA urges the Court to apply the economic loss rule to Plaintiffs’ claim for negligent misrepresentation. Mot. 16. Plaintiffs argue that the economic loss rule does not apply because under California law, negligent misrepresentation is a species of fraud for which economic loss is recoverable. The Court recognizes that reasonable minds can and do disagree on the applicability of the economic loss rule to negligent representation claims, and this issue is ripe to be revisited by the California Supreme Court. However, binding Ninth Circuit precedent supports Plaintiffs’ position in this case. See Kalitta Air, L.L.C. v. Cent. Texas Airborne Sys., Inc., 315 F. App’x 603, 607 (9th Cir. 2008) (“We hold that California law classifies negligent misrepresentation as a species of fraud for which economic loss is recoverable.”) (internal citations and quotations omitted).

For these reasons, CBA’s motion to dismiss Plaintiffs’ causes of action for common law fraud, intentional misrepresentation and negligent misrepresentation is DENIED.

C. Express and Implied Warranty Claims

With respect to Plaintiffs' warranty claims, CBA argues that Plaintiffs have not adequately alleged either a breach of express or implied warranty. Mot. 16-18. Although the Court finds above that a reasonable consumer could be misled by the representations on the packaging for Kona beer, the representations do not amount to an unequivocal statement or promise to the consumer that Kona beer is brewed exclusively in Hawaii.

Plaintiffs' express warranty claim is based on California Commercial Code section 2313, which states, in relevant part, that express warranties are created by a seller as follows:

- (a) Any affirmation of fact or promise made by the seller to the buyer which relates to the goods and becomes part of the basis of the bargain creates an express warranty that the goods shall conform to the affirmation or promise.
- (b) Any description of the goods which is made part of the basis of the bargain creates an express warranty that the goods shall conform to the description.

Cal. Com. Code § 2313(1)(a), (b). To prevail on a breach of express warranty claim, Plaintiffs must prove that: (1) "the seller's statements constitute an affirmation of fact or promise or a description of the goods; (2) the statement was part of the basis of the bargain; and (3) the warranty was breached." Weinstat v. Dentsply Int'l, Inc., 180 Cal.App.4th 1213, 1227, 103 Cal.Rptr.3d 614 (2010) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

Plaintiffs argue that the six- and twelve-packs of Kona expressly warrant that the beer is brewed in Hawaii. Opp'n 18-19. CBA points out that the representations on the packaging are true statements, and argues that they cannot be considered unequivocal statements or guarantees that Kona beer is exclusively brewed in Hawaii. The Court agrees with CBA that the representations on the packaging do not amount to an "affirmation of fact or promise" that the beer is made in Hawaii. Plaintiffs do not cite to any authority that requires the Court to consider the "totality" of the packaging as Plaintiffs suggest. Moreover, the fact that each representation is a truthful statement makes it difficult for Plaintiffs to prevail on an express warranty claim in this case. Here, the mailing address in Kona, Hawaii, the map of Hawaii, and the invitation to visit the brewery are each true statements that identify a real brewery in Kona, Hawaii. Although taken together under the reasonable consumer analysis they may lead consumers to draw inferences that the beer is made in Hawaii, none of the representations constitutes an express promise that formed

1 the basis of the bargain between the parties. Cal. Com. Code § 2313(1)(b). Accordingly, CBA's 2 motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' express warranty claim is GRANTED WITH LEAVE TO AMEND.

3 Plaintiffs' implied warranty cause of action is premised on similar grounds to their express 4 warranty claim, and it fares no better. Plaintiffs make clear that their implied warranty of 5 merchantability claim is predicated on California Commercial Code § 2314(2)(f), which provides 6 that in order for goods to be merchantable they must "[c]onform to the promises or affirmations of 7 fact made on the container or label if any." Cal. Com. Code § 2314(2)(f); Opp'n 19. Plaintiffs 8 argue that CBA "misconstrued the pleadings" by focusing its argument on a separate prong of 9 implied warranty which provides that an implied warranty of merchantability can only exist if the 10 product is not fit for its ordinary purpose and the product "did not possess even the most basic 11 degree of fitness for ordinary use." Mocek v. Alfa Leisure, Inc., 114 Cal.App.4th 402, 406, 7 12 Cal.Rptr.3d 546 (2003). In its motion, CBA does not address Plaintiffs' actual basis for finding a 13 breach of the implied warranty, which is non-conformance with "promises or affirmations" on the 14 packaging for Kona beer.

15 At the hearing on the motion to dismiss, CBA argued that the implied warranty theory is 16 indistinguishable from the express warranty claim, and without an affirmative misrepresentation, 17 both must fail. The Court agrees that Plaintiffs' implied warranty of merchantability claim, which 18 is based solely on whether the product in dispute "conforms to the promises or affirmations of 19 fact" on the product packaging, rises and falls with the express warranty claim. See Hadley v.
20 Kellogg Sales Co., No. 16-CV-04955-LHK, 2017 WL 1065293, at *21 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 21, 2017); 21 Hendricks v. StarKist Co., 30 F.Supp.3d 917, 933 (N.D. Cal. 2014). Because the Court finds that 22 the Hawaiian address, map and brewery invitation on the Kona beer packaging does not establish a 23 promise sufficient to establish an express warranty, the Court also finds that the implied warranty 24 of merchantability claim is insufficiently pled.

25 For these reasons, the Court GRANTS CBA's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' express and 26 implied warranty causes of action WITH LEAVE TO AMEND.

27 D. Plaintiffs' Standing to Pursue Injunctive Relief

28 In addition to other forms of relief, Plaintiffs seek injunctive relief under the CLRA, UCL

1 and FAL. Compl. ¶¶ 121, 135, 142 (requesting the Court “to enjoin Defendants from violating the 2 [CLRA, UCL, FAL] or violating it in the same fashion in the future as discussed herein.”) In 3 order for the Court to grant injunctive relief, Plaintiffs must establish standing that satisfies Article 4 III of the United States Constitution. CBA argues that Plaintiffs lack standing to pursue injunctive 5 relief because they cannot demonstrate “redressability – a likelihood that the requested relief will 6 redress the alleged injury.” Steel Co. v. Citizens for a Better Env’t, 523 U.S. 83, 103 (1998); Mot.
7 18. For the reasons below, the Court finds that Plaintiffs lack standing to seek injunctive relief.

8 In general, “[p]ast exposure to harmful or illegal conduct does not necessarily confer 9 standing to seek injunctive relief if the plaintiff does not continue to suffer adverse effects.” 10 Mayfield v. United States, 599 F.3d 964, 970 (9th Cir. 2010). Article III requires plaintiffs to 11 show that they face a “real or immediate threat . . . that [they] will again be wronged in a similar 12 way” in order to obtain injunctive relief. Id. (quoting City of Los Angeles v. Lyons, 465 U.S. 95, 13 111 (1983)). In the context of a class action, “[u]nless the named plaintiffs are themselves entitled 14 to seek injunctive relief, they may not represent a class seeking that relief.” Hodgers-Durgin v. de 15 la Vina, 199 F.3d 1037, 1045 (9th Cir. 1999).

16 Here, Plaintiffs have alleged that each representative purchased a variety of Kona beer and 17 relied on the representations on the packaging. Compl. ¶¶ 12-14. Plaintiffs believed they were 18 “purchasing a beer brewed in Hawaii.” Id. None of the plaintiffs was aware that Kona beer was 19 actually brewed in the continental United States, and the Consolidated Complaint alleges that 20 Plaintiffs “would not have purchased the [Kona beer] or would have paid significantly less for it 21 had [they] known that it was brewed in the continental United States.” Id. Now that Plaintiffs 22 clearly are aware that the six- and twelve-packs of Kona beer they purchased were not brewed in 23 Hawaii, it is unlikely, based upon their own allegations, that Plaintiffs would suffer the same harm 24 again.

25 Plaintiffs attempt to salvage their injunctive relief claims by hanging on their single 26 allegation that “[d]espite being misled by Defendants, Plaintiffs would likely purchase the Kona 27 Brewing Co. Beers in the future if the Kona Brewing Co. Beers were in fact brewed in Hawaii.”
28 Id. ¶ 98; Opp’n 20. This argument falls flat. Based on Plaintiffs’ alleged injury, the Court’s

1 authority extends only to enjoining CBA from using deceptive references to Hawaii on its 2 packaging. The Court cannot issue a mandatory injunction forcing CBA to alter its production 3 process so as to brew Kona beer in Hawaii and export it to the United States. The Consolidated 4 Complaint therefore fails to demonstrate redressability because Plaintiffs have not alleged that 5 they would purchase Kona beer in the future in its current form.

6 Even if Plaintiffs were to allege that they would purchase Kona beer again at its current 7 price as it is currently brewed, such an allegation is inconsistent with their allegations that they 8 would not have bought the beer, or would have paid significantly less for it, had they known it was 9 not brewed in Hawaii. Plaintiffs now have knowledge that the beer is not in fact brewed in 10 Hawaii, so they cannot show that “they will be injured by [CBA] again in a similar way and that 11 the future injury can be redressed by injunctive relief.” Luman v. Theismann, 647 Fed. App’x 804, 12 807 (9th Cir. 2016)(citing Bates v. United Parcel Servs., Inc., 511 F.3d 974, 985 (9th Cir. 2007)).
13 Now that Plaintiffs are aware of the reality of Kona’s production process, there is simply no 14 likelihood that Plaintiffs will be deceived into purchasing Kona beer again under the assumption 15 that it is imported from Hawaii. See, e.g., Anderson v. The Hain Celestial Grp., Inc., ---F. Supp.
16 3d---, No. 5:14-CV-03895-EJD, 2015 WL 1744279, at *5-6 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 8, 2015); Garrison v.
17 Whole Foods Mkt. Grp., Inc., No. 13-CV-05222-VC, 2014 WL 2451290, at *5 (N.D. Cal. June 2, 18 2014).

19 Plaintiffs rely heavily on Ries v. Arizona Beverages USA LLC to demonstrate that some 20 courts in this district have conferred standing on plaintiffs to seek class-wide injunctive relief 21 under California’s consumer protection statutes for false labeling claims so long as the plaintiffs 22 stated an intent to purchase the challenged product in the future. 287 F.R.D. 523, 534 (N.D. Cal.
23 2012); Opp’n 20. First, as explained above, Plaintiffs here do not state that they would purchase 24 Kona beer in the future. They allege only that they would purchase hypothetical Kona beer that 25 was brewed in Kona, Hawaii. Therefore, Ries is inapposite since the court there dealt with the 26 plaintiff’s stated intention to purchase the actual iced tea product at issue in the future.

27 Moreover, the Court does not find the reasoning in Ries or related cases persuasive on the 28 issue of injunctive relief in this context. 287 F.R.D. at 534; see also Henderson v. Gruma Corp.,

No. 10-04173, 2011 WL 1362188 at *7-8 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 11, 2011). The courts that have found plaintiffs to have standing to pursue injunctive relief in such cases do so in order to fulfill the purpose of California’s consumer protection statutes. This Court finds itself among the other federal district courts that recognize the “realities inherent in the false labeling factual scenario” and dismiss claims for injunctive relief because the representative plaintiff’s alleged injury will not be repeated. “[I]n other words, having become aware of the mislabeling, there is no danger that [Plaintiffs] will be misled in the future.” Anderson v. The Hain Celestial Grp., Inc., 87 F. Supp. 3d 1226, 1234 (N.D. Cal. 2015) (quoting Garrison v. Whole Foods Mkt. Grp., Inc., No. 13–cv–05222–VC, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 75271, at *20, 2014 WL 2451290, at *5 (N.D. Cal. June 2, 2014)). In contrast to federal courts, California state courts are not bound by the limitations of Article III standing and may choose to enforce their consumer protection laws by granting injunctive relief to a plaintiff in the false-labeling context. However, the Court agrees with the reasoning in Anderson that “any provisions for injunctive relief enacted by the California legislature are not sufficient to confer standing under the Constitution,” and thus an interest in preserving an underlying statutory scheme “can never overcome a constitutional standing prerequisite.” 87 F. Supp.3d at 1234. See also Bird v. First Alert, Inc., No. 14-3585, 2014 WL 7248734, at *5 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 19, 2014) (“[A] public policy exception to the standing requirement—which plaintiff seems to be attempting to argue here—does not comport with Article III’s mandate.”) (internal citations and quotations omitted).

In light of the foregoing analysis, the Court requires Plaintiffs to demonstrate constitutional standing as a prerequisite to pursuing injunctive relief. Because Plaintiffs do not allege that they would purchase Kona beer as it is currently made in the future, and because Plaintiffs are now aware that Kona beer is not actually brewed in Hawaii, Plaintiffs have not and cannot establish “a real and immediate threat of repeated injury.” Bates v. United Parcel Serv., Inc., 511 F.3d 974, 985 (9th Cir. 2007); Anderson, 2015 WL 1744279, at *6. As such, amending the allegations in the Consolidated Complaint would be futile. See Lopez v. Smith, 203 F.3d 1122, 1130 (9th Cir. 2000). This outcome is without prejudice to Plaintiffs pursuing parallel relief in a state court of competent jurisdiction, but Plaintiffs are unable to plead facts in this context to confer standing in federal

1 court for injunctive relief. See Anderson, 2015 WL 1744279, at *6.

2 For these reasons, CBA's motion to dismiss is GRANTED WITHOUT LEAVE TO 3 AMEND with respect to Plaintiffs' request for injunctive relief.

4 E. Equitable Relief

5 In addition to injunctive relief, Plaintiffs seek equitable relief in the form of restitution 6 under their CLRA, UCL, and FAL claims as well as pursuant to their ninth cause of action for 7 unjust enrichment. Compl. ¶¶ 121, 135, 142, 189. CBA argues that "it is doubtful whether there is 8 a viable cause of action for unjust enrichment under California law." Mot. 20. Therefore, CBA 9 argues that Plaintiffs cannot pursue restitution based upon a theory of unjust enrichment/quasi-10 contract because the claim for equitable relief is duplicative of their statutory state law claims. Id.

11 Defendants seek dismissal of Plaintiffs' unjust enrichment claims under California law on 12 the ground that California does not recognize such a claim. This Court has previously addressed 13 the issue of pleading unjust enrichment. See Los Gatos Mercantile, Inc v. E.I. DuPont De 14 Nemours & Co., No. 13-CV-01180, 2015 WL 4755335, at *30 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 11, 2015); Romero
15 v. Flowers Bakeries, LLC, 2015 WL 2125004, at *9 (N.D. Cal. May 6, 2015). The Court follows 16 recent Ninth Circuit precedent, which holds that "in California, there is not a standalone cause of 17 action for 'unjust enrichment,' which is synonymous with 'restitution.'" Astiana v. Hain Celestial 18 Grp., Inc., 783 F.3d 753, 762 (9th Cir. 2015). However, because restitution is a recognized 19 "theory underlying a claim that a defendant has been unjustly conferred a benefit 'through 20 mistake, fraud, coercion, or request,'" id. (quoting 55 Cal. Jur. 3d Restitution § 2), the remedy for 21 which is "typically sought in a quasi-contract cause of action," id., "a court may 'construe the 22 cause of action [for unjust enrichment] as a quasi-contract claim seeking restitution,'" id. (quoting 23 Rutherford Holdings, LLC v. Plaza Del Rey, 223 Cal. App. 4th 221, 231 (2014)). Moreover, that 24 an unjust enrichment claim may be "nonsensical because it was duplicative of or superfluous to" a 25 plaintiff's other claims is not grounds for dismiss[al]. Id. (citing and quoting Fed. R. Civ. P.
26 8(d)(2) ("A party may set out 2 or more statements of a claim or defense alternatively or 27 hypothetically, either in a single count or defense or in separate ones.")).

Plaintiffs' ninth cause of action is for "Quasi-Contract/Unjust Enrichment/Restitution," wherein they allege that CBA was "unjustly enriched" from the misleading representations on the packaging for Kona beer which induced consumers to pay (or pay more) for beer that they would not have purchased had they not been deceived. Compl. ¶¶ 183-89. These allegations are sufficient to state a quasi-contract cause of action under California law. Astiana, 783 F.3d at 762. CBA's argument that the unjust enrichment claim must fail since there is an adequate remedy of law under claims for violation of the consumer protection statutes is not grounds for dismissal. Id. at 763; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(d)(2) ("A party may set out 2 or more statements of a claim or defense alternatively or hypothetically, either in a single count or defense or in separate ones.")

Accordingly, the Court DENIES CBA's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' unjust enrichment claims under California law.⁶

F. The Nationwide Class

CBA's motion to dismiss also challenges Plaintiffs' attempt to bring claims on behalf of a nationwide class.⁷ CBA argues that the named plaintiffs in this action lack standing to bring claims on behalf of out-of-state consumers, and that claims by out-of-state consumers likewise fail for lack of personal jurisdiction over CBA in California. See id. 21-24. In regard to the standing issue, Plaintiffs argue that a motion to dismiss is not the appropriate time to challenge class allegations. Opp'n 22. CBA argues that standing should be addressed at the pleading stage when a representative plaintiff in a class action seeks to bring claims based on the laws of states in which no named plaintiff resides. Mot. 21 (citing Morales v. Unilever U.S., Inc., No. 13-2213, 2014 WL 1389613, at *4-5 (E.D. Cal. Apr. 9, 2014)). Under controlling Ninth Circuit precedent, the Court agrees with CBA that it should address standing prior to class certification. See Easter v. Am. W.

⁶ In its reply, CBA argues for the first time that the unjust enrichment claim must fail along with Plaintiffs' claims for breach of express and implied warranty because Plaintiffs have not identified a false representation upon which an unjust enrichment claim can be based. Reply 5 (citing McKinnis v. Sunny Delight Beverages Co., No. 07-2521, 2007 WL 4766525, at *5-6 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 4, 2007)). The Court "need not consider arguments raised for the first time in a reply brief," and refuses to consider CBA's argument on that ground. Zamani v. Carnes, 491 F.3d 1039, 1048 (9th Cir. 2003).

1 Fin., 381 F.3d 948, 962 (9th Cir.2004). Moreover, when a plaintiff's lack of standing is "plain 2 enough from the pleadings," it can form appropriate grounds for dismissal even if it overlaps with 3 issues regarding whether the named plaintiffs are adequate representatives under Rule 23. Gen.
4 Tel. Co. of Sw. v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 160 (1982); see also Morales, 2014 WL 1389613, at *5.

5 However, in this case, the Consolidated Complaint does not allege claims on behalf of out-6 of-state plaintiffs based on violations of non-California laws. Therefore, the parties' arguments on 7 this point are moot. At the hearing on the motion to dismiss, the Court made clear to Plaintiffs 8 that they have not alleged claims under consumer protection statutes in 49 other states. As 9 written, the Consolidated Complaint's allegations are made on behalf of three putative classes: a 10 nationwide class and two California subclasses. Compl. ¶ 99. Plaintiffs clarified at the hearing 11 that the nationwide class brings its claims under the federal common law. The Court need not 12 decide whether the named plaintiffs in this case, all of whom are California residents, have 13 standing to bring claims on behalf of out-of-state members of the nationwide class for violations 14 of their states' laws since such claims are simply not alleged in the Consolidated Complaint.⁸

15 For a different reason, the Court also need not address the parties' arguments regarding 16 personal jurisdiction over CBA as to claims by out-of-state consumers at this stage of the case.
17 Recognizing that there are two types of personal jurisdiction, general and specific, the parties do 18 not dispute whether CBA is subject to general jurisdiction in California. Rather, Plaintiffs only 19 allege that CBA is subject to specific jurisdiction in California. Opp'n 22. Likewise, CBA 20 concedes that there exists specific jurisdiction over CBA as to claims brought by California 21 residents who allegedly bought Kona beer in California. Mot. 23. However, CBA argues that 22 there is no specific personal jurisdiction over CBA with regard to the claims brought by non-23 resident nationwide class members who did not purchase Kona beer in California. Id. Plaintiffs 24 argue in response that the Court can exercise pendent personal jurisdiction over CBA as to claims

26
27 ⁸ To the extent Plaintiffs desire to add allegations for violations of the laws of states other than 28 California, Plaintiffs are required to seek leave to amend the complaint. The Court has already made clear to Plaintiffs that such a drastic amendment would significantly delay this case and would require a named plaintiff from each of the states whose laws are alleged to be violated.

brought by out-of-state consumers because their claims arise from the “same nucleus of operative facts as claimed by [the California] Plaintiffs.” Opp’n 23.

After the parties finished briefing the instant motion to dismiss, the Supreme Court handed down Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. v. Superior Court of California, San Francisco Cty., 137 S. Ct. 1773 (2017) (“Bristol-Myers”). CBA filed a statement of recent decision regarding Bristol-Myers and argued that the case supports its contention that CBA is not subject to specific jurisdiction in California as to out-of-state claims. ECF 25. In Bristol-Myers, in the context of a mass tort action in state court, the U.S. Supreme Court reversed the California Supreme Court and held that California could not exercise specific jurisdiction over Bristol-Myers Squibb with respect to claims by non-residents of California who did not claim to have suffered harm in California. 137 S. Ct. at 1782. Justice Alito wrote for the 8-1 majority and explained that the case against Bristol-Myers Squibb regarding the effects of its drug Plavix was missing “a connection between the forum and the specific claims at issue.” Id. at 1781. “When no such connection exists, specific jurisdiction is lacking regardless of the extent of a defendant’s unconnected activities in the State.” Id.

At first blush, Bristol-Myers appears to support CBA’s argument that the Court cannot exercise specific personal jurisdiction over CBA as to claims by out-of-state plaintiffs who were not injured in California. Indeed, the implication of the decision appears to be that mass actions in state courts can only proceed where the defendant is subject to general jurisdiction, which for a corporation would be the state of incorporation or its principal place of business. Regardless of the temptation by defendants across the country to apply the rationale of Bristol-Myers to a class action in federal court, its applicability to such cases was expressly left open by the Supreme Court and has yet to be considered by lower federal courts.⁹ Indeed, this Court may be among the first to rule on the implications of the decision for nationwide class actions. However, given the timing, the parties to this putative class action have not yet briefed the implications of Bristol-Myers or its applicability to the facts of this case. In light of these considerations, the Court defers consideration of CBA's specific personal jurisdiction arguments until class certification, when the parties will be able to brief their positions, including whether Bristol-Myers should apply to this case and whether it overrules other cases on which the parties rely in their motion to dismiss briefing.¹⁰

Therefore, CBA's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' claims on behalf of out-of-state members of the nationwide class is DENIED without prejudice to CBA raising these issues again at class certification.

V. ORDER

For the foregoing reasons, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that CBA's Motion to Dismiss is GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART:

1. CBA's motion to dismiss all of Plaintiffs' causes of action on the ground that Plaintiffs fail to allege actionable misrepresentations on the packaging for Kona beer is DENIED.
2. CBA's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' CLRA, UCL and FAL causes of action is DENIED.
3. CBA's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' causes of action for common law fraud, intentional misrepresentation, and negligent misrepresentation is DENIED.
4. CBA's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' causes of action for breach of express warranty and breach of implied warranty is GRANTED. These claims are DISMISSED WITH LEAVE TO AMEND in a manner consistent with this Order.

¹⁰ As discussed at the motion to dismiss hearing, the Court finds that the prejudice to CBA in deferring a ruling on personal jurisdiction over CBA as to out-of-state plaintiffs at this stage is slight. The implications for discovery are minimal because the parties do not dispute personal jurisdiction over CBA as to the named plaintiffs and the California subclasses, and the nationwide class does not assert any claims that the California subclasses do not also assert.
